NEW MACHINE IS SAID TO MAGNIFY ELECTRIC POWER

British Invention of "Cold Electricity" Opens Revolutionary Prospects

LIGHT WOULD COST LESS THAN WATER

Amplifying Device, It Is Claimed, Would Make Central Power Stations Unnecessary

BY WIRELESSTOTHE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR SAINT HELENS, Eng.-Experts of the General Electric Metropolitan Vickers and other companies are investigating the merits of what is claimed to be a remarkable dis-covery by William Harrison, an inventor here, who, after 17 years of research, is reported to have devised a machine which magnifies electrical Thomas Wood, a Saint Helens councillor, who is the provider of the financial backing to enable Mr. Harrison to bring his invention to completion, declared to a Monitor representative that: "The machine," which has been patented but as yet is unnamed "will revolutionize all methods of power production." Describing the invention which, he said, betokens a new era for light and power, Mr. Wood said: "The machine through which the current passes is encased in a plain wooden box, six inches each way. So long as we can maintain a vacuum, we can magnify the unit of generated electricity at will. One of the greatest troubles has been to get this vacuum in cylindrical form, so that it would be permanent. This has now been accomplished.

"If we said we had gained perpetual motion, we should not be be-lieved," continued Mr. Wood. "You may call it perpetual power if you like, and yet that is perhaps inaccurate as after a time there would have to be renewals. You can say, how-ever, that it is 99 per cent perpetual power. When we made a thorough test an electric lamp in the room

Sir Wilfred said that calculations made shortly after the photographs were taken indicated that 40,000,000 hersepower was running to waste. He thinks it highly improbable that the falls have ever been seen before by a white man. The falls not yet named, he said, are now one of the objects of a new expedition of the Royal Geographical Society.

Many changes have occurred in Labrador since Sir Wilfred was sent there 36 years ago, which have releemed it of its reputation of being desolate, useless region. #### Give and Take in Europe

BY WIRELESS FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON - Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, addressing a meet-ing at Glasgow, said that in the past four years, Europe, which had been divided into two hostile camps, had ecome at any rate a united Europe to this extent that there was no onger any mention of allies or exenemies, but an attitude bringing all countries, irrespective of the past, into closer contact, into amiable discussion of questions concerning the future. No individual, he said, had contributed more to that than Sir Austen Chamberlain.

Europe had now become accustomed, in place of hurling dispatches at one another across the frontier, to meet in friendly converse. They had learned by that that other nations had a point of view which was not only worthy in itself of considera-tion, but which must be considered if there was to be any possibility of agreement on outstanding questions. There was today in Europe an attitude of give and take which was absent before the war.

England's wealth lies in its coal, and only a small fraction of the wealth, he argued, is utilized under present methods of burning. Chronic depression in the coal industry is not confined to the United States, but is seen equally in England, he said, where relief could be found by extracting the valuable by-products from coal before they are lost up the chimney. This would end the smoke nuisance also, he said.

he said, one half a ton of coal is used to bring it up to running spee again. One quarter of the nation's soft coal is burned by railroads. At present, he said, three-quarters of the heat generated on a locomotive is lost through the stack. If only 1 per cent of present ash content could be removed from coals by better cleansing processes, it would mean that 25,000 50-ton capacity coal cars, making up 213 trains, would not have to be transported,

How Austria was left by the treaty of St. Germain without adequate supplies of fuel so that trains virtually stopped running, and the conserva-tion program adopted by the nation to meet this emergency, was told by Dr. Bartel Granigg, Leoben, Austria a professor of the university at that town. The conservation program involved the whole Nation and its in-habitants. Today hydraulic power has been harnessed and Austria, although inadequately supplied with domestic resources, is using these with great efficiency.

Dr. Davis, in his inaugural address declared that many colleges over-specialize their undergraduate engineering curriculum. He urged "one fundamental unspecialized curriculum in engineering" which would ground the student in the essentials of all engineering and prepare him for post graduate specialization, professional proficiency and satisfactory human relationships."

BAKER BEDDING

What's in a Name?"

There is a standard of quality in almost every field of manufacture—a leader with which all others are compared. Leadership of this sort requires extra care and craftsmanship rarely possible with mass production.

Take bedding, for instance. In homes where comfort and quality are the only considerations in mattress buying, you frequently find Baker Hair Mattresses.

The Baker Blue Stripe Mattress, hand-made throughout, all-hair-upholstered, with a resilient inner spring unit of our own design, leaves nothing to be

FEWER GAMES THIS WEEK-END

Harvard-Yale Big Feature of Eastern College Gridiron Battles

There is quite a reduction in the number of college football games which are to be played by the eastern elevens of the United States this week-end, due in part to some having completed their 1928 schedules while others are resting up in preparation for their Thanksgiving Day games next week Thursday. What the day will lack in quantity, however, is pretty sure to be made up for in quality and tradition

While there is no chance of th me of the Harvard-Yale game at New Haven having any bearing on a claim to a high place in eastern college football circles this fall, it will be the feature game of the East. Yale has lost three games this fall while Harvard has lost two and been held to a tie; but still the demand for tickets to the Yale Bowl has far exceeded the supply and there will be few, if any, vacant places when the two teams trot out on the field.

Last year Yale won by a score of 14 to 0. This year Yale is working under a new coach while Harvard is enjoying its third season under Arnold Hor ween '21. M. A. Stevens '25 has succeeded T. A. D. Jones '08 as head coach at Yale and has carried on the Jones' system, with which he is very familiar, as he has been assistant to Jones during the past two seasons.

The Forward-Passing Game That the game this week-end will be as hard-fought as any Harvard-Yale game is expected as the players on these two teams generally rise to other. Neither team has shown proficiency at throwing or defending against the forward-passing game, and the teams which have defeated them have made good use of that style of offense. Both Harvard and Vale are pressured of strong running. Yale are possessed of strong running plays; but in the absence of an overhead game, have been unable to make the most of their attacks because the opponents could concentrate on the running game. During the past two or three weeks, Harvard has been devoting considerable time to trying to develop a good forward-passing game and, should the Crimson succeed, it will make things more than interesting for Yale unless the Eli has developed a far better defense than it howed against Princeton. Both elevens appear to be stronger lefensively than offensively and, with the game as uncertain as it is today and upsets coming with surprising frequency, it is not surprising that the followers of the two elevens are probably more in doubt about the out-town, is unquestionably one of the best teams in the East, while Car-negle Tech has, by its seven straight strong elevens as Washington & Jef-ferson, University of Pittsburgh, Georgetown and Notre Dame on suc-cessive Saturdays, proven its claim to being ranked not only as the pos-sible champion of the East, but of the entire country. Surely a victory this sible champion of the East, but of the entire country. Surely a victory this week-end will come pretty close to giving it championship recognition in the East, while a defeat will deprive it of any such claim. Last year New York won, 20 to 6, but this fall's game takes place at Pittsburgh and the Taylars seem oute confident.

Princeton in Late Game
Princeton, for the first time in many season and the battle promises to be a very interesting one.

There are two intersectional games between eastern and western teams which should furnish some great baseball and draw big gatherings. Dartmouth, which showed a great comeback against Cornell last Saturday after having lost to Harvard, Yale and Brown on the previous Saturdays, will meet Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. Abdel El Bagimel El Ouafi is in Boston. About the name hovers an air of romance and visions of turbaned sheiks, Hindus, hot sands, and morose camels. But "El Ouafi" is more recognizable to sports followers as the name of the young Algerian who sprang into the limelight in the 1928 Olympics to win the Marathon race over the best that the world had to offer, including J. W. Ray, against whom he is scheduled to race in the Boston Garden, tomorrow night, at the regular Maratog and the species of the best advantage above 20 miles. Ouafi's mother and two sisters live in Biskra and what money he expects to get out of his tour, about $10,000, in Biskra and what money he expects to get out of his tour, about $10,000, morrow night, at the regular Mara-thon distance of 26 miles 385 yards. From the rolling sand dunes of the Morocco Desert to the board tracks of the Boston Garden is a far cry in-deed, but El Ouafi has done it!

At present sports followers are more interested in the Algerian's running ability than his name, although both are unique in the sports world. El Quañ brings to the board track an unique in the sports world. He was to the board track an unique in the sports world. He was to the board track an unique in the waste track and tr limited knowledge of the running-game, and he can run 26 miles as easily and as steadily as he can 10. Therein lies the secret of his success as a longdistance runner.

Ouafi's career bears a close resem-blance to that of the dispatch runner who raced from Marathon to Athens after the battle of Marathon with news of the Athenian victory, whence came the name—Marathon. Ray's rival was also a dispatch runner in the Colonial Army of France stationed in Morocco. While in the service he built up a reputation for himself and built up a reputation for himself and competed in several army meets with great success. His first real race was in 1918 in army circles.

In 1924 he was discovered by Francois Quilgars, one of the ablest of Paris trainers and he immediately had him engage in the 1924 Olympic try-lease from the Cardinals when he learned William B. McKechnie had been the control of the control of learned William B. McKechnie had been displaced as manager. Onslow said he had an offer to coach for Walter P. Johnson at Washington, but that he had received the Newark bid first. Onslow also said he had learned that E. T. Collins was to manage the Baltimore Internationals next season. him engage in the 1924 Olympic try-outs. He finished seventh in the 1924 Olympics. This year he won the try-outs in Paris and also captured the Olympies. His trainer is accompanying him on his present tour.

Ouafi's career reads like a story-book. He was a poor boy and has never before known the luxuries that have been his since his advent in the United States where the best is none too good for his improved tastes. The life that he has lived in this country was to him a closed book before his prowess was shown in the Olympics. Although formerly a strict vegetarian, due mostly to his poor circumstances, his meals in this country have included chicken and other meats. "He never looks at the price but just asks for what he wants," said William H. Pickens, who has charge of the tour that is carrying Ouafi and Ray around the country in a series of exhibition races.
"And that is natural because all of his expenses are being paid."

Beats Ray In New York

Ouafi has what is called a "plugging" style on the track. It is best adapated to the longest distances. He is not a sprinter in any sense of the word as Ray is. His success comes from wearing down his opponent. His best mile has been clocked at 4m. 40s. and his record at Amsterdam for the 26 miles. 385 yards was 2h. 32m.

DETROIT, Mich.—A former Duluth star and two former Boston players contributed sparkling bits of hockey here Thursday night to turn back the Boston Bruins by a socre of 2 to 0. The win gave the Detroit Cougars two points and moved them up ahead of Ross's team in the United States section of the National Hockey League standing.

utes of hockey, featured by sturdy de-fensive work and brilliant goal tend-ing, Lewis finally contributed the first Detroit score. He hurdled through the Boston defense, forced Thompson to his knees with his first shot, and then drove the rebound over the goal tender's body as he lay across the mouth of his goal. Throughout the third period the visitors used every known bit of strategy to get the tying goal. They failed mainly because Dolson, Detroit goalle,

This Is the Aim of the National Amateur Athletic Federation

CHICAGO - More emphasis on general athletics throughout the coun-try next year will be the aim of the National Amateur Athletic Federation. as the result of action taken by the executive committee in a special meeting, held in New York. While many persons are disturbed over what they choose to call the "overemphasis on highly organized athletics" the federa-tion unit members will undertake to bring about greater emphasis general athletic participation. An effort will be made to accomplish, through the agency of the colleges, schools, playgrounds, Y. M. C. It is thought that this number may be, materially enlarged if the American people realize that "it pays to play."

The federation calls attention to the fact that the per capita wealth has increased from $1165 in 1900 to $2924 in 1926, and that in the same time the average working day has decreased from 12 to nine hours. This means that as a people we have more time and money to use for leisure time activities than our fathers had.

WiTH Carnegie Tech and New York winning for the East, while Pittsburgh and Nebraska played a control tie, eastern college football had the better of it in its three big East-West games last week-end, and the Carnegie Tech victory over Notre Dame was the big victory for the East. This Saturday the two eastern winners will come together in which a claim to the mythical championship of the East will be settled, as Carnegie Tech has won all its games and victory in its remaining contests will undoubtedly earn championship recognition with most of the followers of the game.

The Harvard freshmen made it three ing contests will undoubtedly earn champjonship recognition with most of the followers of the game.

The Harvard freshmen made it three straight over the Yale freshmen at New Haven last Saturday when they won, I to 6. The point after touchdown was the way that gave them the victory, again showing the importance of having a good drop-kicker around. It is very doubtful if 40 per cent of the tries for point after in the United States this fall have been successful.

No better proof of the necessity of having a good goal-kicker is to be had than the case of the Louisiana State-Georgia game in the Southern Conference, where the point-after kicked by G. W. Nesom '29, Louisiana tackle, not only gave his team the victory by a score of 13 to 12, but kept it in line for a claim to the conference championship, as Louisiana had won all its previous championship games.

Five teams remain both undefeated and untied in the Southern Conference after Saturday's battles, and the status of these teams will remain unchanged until Thanksgiving Day, when each will stake its high ranking in another family game. Florida, Georgia Technology and Tennessee, by virtue of the large number of victories won and the strength of the opposition encountered, are entitled to a place at the top of the heap. Virginia P. I. and L. S. U. have been less impressive, but are still in an excellent position to claim the title Florida continues to lead the high scorers with the enormous total of 264 points in seven games, and also is the leading defensive team, having permitted the opposition only 25 points, or a fraction over three to the game. University of the South has the poorest defensive record, having allowed 274 points.

For comebacks by football elevens this fall, that of Dartmouth should be given This is the season of baseball meetings. The Eastern League meets Nov. 25; the National League and American League hold their separate meetings Dec. 12 and joint meeting Dec. 13. The New England League has already held two meetings.

Leslie A. Mann, who has been released by the New York Glants, has a wealth of baseball experience and knowledge at his command, and his signing as manager of some minor league team is naturally expected to follow.

Claude B. Davidson was elected to Claude B. Davidson was elected to presidency of the New England League for a three-year term at the meeting Thursday night. The usual contract calls for only a one-year contract, but Sunday baseball it was thought warranted a longer contract.

For comebacks by football elevens this fall, that of Dartmouth should be given every consideration. Faced with the loss of many of the star players at different times in the schedule and after successive defeats at the hands of Harvard. Yale and Brown, the Green certainly did a remarkable piece of work in defeating Cornell by any such score as 28 to 0 Northwestern University will not have as easy a game as the Wildcats were looking for when the teams meet this week-end in Chicago. George Wright, former star baseball player and a man who has done much to promote all forms of athletics, has donated a cup for the New England interscholastic golf championship. The Massachusetts Golf Association has decided to revive this competition after a lapse of 15 years, and the cup presented by Mr. Wright and which is to be known as the George Wright Cup, will be the prize for which the school boys will compete.

Thus the navy is "sitting tight" on short waves so far as aircraft is concerned, and outside of some five or six sets that are on order, is prepared to say it with a lot of watchful waiting. Incidentally, there used to be the ancient idea that with the short wave, you saved a lot of weight and that this was going to be a price-less boon to the pilot.

Unfortunately, as one aviator expressed it, everyone had gone off "half-cocked" with the idea that with one-third the weight you get around three times the range" when that was not the way it worked out, at all. In fact, the navy found that sometimes the high frequency transmitter weighed even more than did ne low frequency transmitter. Moreover, in considering any aircraft outfits, there is always the radio generator to be counted right in with the weight. The only differ-ence worth talking of would be the smaller coil in the tuned circuits and fewer plates; that is, for the normal frequencies around 3000 kc. or so.

Case of the Bremen On very long flights, with fuel a steady problem, a low frequency installation is prohibitive. Baron Huenefeld told on his trip here in the spring that a set weighing some 120 pounds had been ready and at the last minute put aside because they were afraid of that extra weight on the Bremen on the hop across the Atlantic.

A low wave set of 20 k. w. simply could not be placed in one of our ships on account of the size, thus the pilot accepts a lot less reliabil-ity in favor of the high frequency outfit, on the long flight across the

It is unfortunate that so few amateur radio enthusiasts seem to have taken to the air, as yet. Real experts in this difficult field are extremely limited in either the army or navy air services. In fact, they may almost be counted on one hand, and the writer knows only six or eight men in either service who are skill-ful pilots and radio technicians as well. This would seem to bring the problem right back to the amateur for solution. It is he who has solved problem after problem, after the noted men of natural science have failed. The government experts have the money and the laboratories and the amateur has the enthusiasm and the patience.

of television than the solution of its antenna in the same position relaequipment out on the high seas, and technical problems, than radiocasttory equipment, is public opinion, according to Charles Golenpaul of Consequently it is essential that the Clarostat Manufacturing Comfacturers are engaged in spreading propaganda to dampen such enthu-siasm as may exist for television. If so, such practice is to be deplored, Our own engineering staff has spent month after month in televisio search, and we are fully aware of the many technical problems that stand in the way of a commercial solution. Nevertheless, we feel that television, As it exists today, is not very dif-ferent from the early days of radio-casting, when programs and rendi-tion may have been "impossible" as judged by present-day standards, yet nevertheless provided a thrill which can never be approached in our highly perfected radiocasting of today.

Television, we grant, is only an experiment. The present equipment is still far removed from anything approaching the commercial stage. It will be years before we have anything approaching our radiocasting achievement. Nevertheless, we contend that the thrill of receiving a moving picture through space, no matter how crude, no matter how troublesome, and even no matter what it may cost, offsets all other considerations. Furthermore, it is through the untiring efforts of ex-perimenters that we shall attain ulti-mate perfection in television. Radio history is certain to repeat itself

Happy Ever After

The dancing, flickering, changing gleam and shade, Made rich the gathering dusk one winter day, And merry, unexpected shadows played, And whisp'ring firelight had its cozy way.

In earnest quiet an oft-told tale once more, Still dearly loved and followed word by word, With interest rapt and thrilling as before.

But when the mother ceased each kept his place As if the best came still, and she could see How tense the look upon each little face, But did not fathom the expectancy.

At last came protest: "Mother, dear, you know Our stories always finish in this way: 'And they were happy ever after.' So Do please go on and say the same today."

The cheery flames leaped high as if to woo The nodding shadows, and the mother smiled With sudden-visioned joy, as if she too Could see the sunlit pathway of a child She said: "Dear children, you are right, 'And they Were happy ever after,' all the way.'

HERBERT HOOVER Son of American Pioneers

Family records and the memories of relatives close to l'erbert Hoover at various periods of his career have been drawn upon for a series of sketches prepared for THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR by a first cousin of the President-elect. Previous articles have dealt with the experiences of Mr. Hoover's ancestors and with his own early boyhood at West Branch, Ia. Material for this concluding article is taken largely from a letter written at Newport, Ore., Feb. 28, 1920, by Dr. John Minthorn, Mr. Hoover's uncle. Quotations

By MRS. ETHEL GRACE RENSCH

Hoover, a lad of 10 years, arrived in tried industry in the place of an old Newberg, Ore., in 1884, he found himself in the midst of a busy and in-bitious, and not only required "en-teresting community. The region was thusiasm and earnestness," but "also just changing from a wheat-growing generated those qualities." More than to a fruit-growing country, and peo-ple from Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, Illi-self-sacrifice." was a Quaker colony, having been founded and settled largely by Quakers, who in obedience to that potent law of the American pioneer, "the attraction of cheap land," had moved farther west. But the purpose and motive of the Quaker people was permeated, also, by that inherent desire to serve, which is characteristic of the sect. Such were the motives which had led the Minthorns and the Wasleys ever onto new frontiers, and, ultimately, the same purpose brought one of their sons, Dr. John Minthorn, to the far shores of the West. Dr. Minthorn was among the first members of the little colony in Newberg, Ore., where he took a leading part in its establishment, and where, while the place was still in the making, the doctor's young nephew; Herbert Hoover, joined him.

As in all such pioneer communities in the early part of the nineteenth century, the religious and educational welfare of the settlers in Newberg was among the first concerns of its founders. Soon after the meetinghouse had been built, the Friends' Pacific Academy was founded, Dr. Minthorn being one of its principal promotors and administrators, as well as one of its first

Into such an atmosphere, Herbert Hoover came when still very young and impressionable. His uncle testifies that he was indeed an "interested and active participant in the midst of all this strenuous life." There are, moreover, some things in connection with his activities and interests in Oregon, which are particularly significant, for they indicate his bent even at that early date.

For instance, when he arrived at his uncle's house, he had with him a small book in which he had kept an account of all the money he had ever had, and what he had done with it. That was an unusual thing for a 10-year-old boy to have done on his own initiative. Yet Herbert Hoover was a normal boy, living as almost any orphan boy would have lived in his uncle's house. There is an episode in connection with his coming which gives one a significant glimpse of a boy's heart. Be sides his account book, Herbert had two other treasures. They had doubtless been his mother's, being two large mottoes, which he hung on the wall of his room. "I Will Never Leave Thee" verse was, "I will never leave thee undertaking for a people who were nor forsake thee." planned as a decoration for the nursery table, was about 9 inches high. and shaped of twigs of a feathery shrub of prickly nature fastened together to take the form of a real Christmas tree on a tiny scale. It was decorated with silver thread and beads, the beads, of all colors, being strung on the thread at intervals. HAIRS for the living room receive but scant attention during the summer. Porch seats, garden nooks, automobile fittings and grassy, picnic-inviting banks proffer seasonal and welcome resting places.

HAIRS for the living room receive wined themselves among lattices and trees of equally mysterious origin. This chair always stood by a southern window in the living-room of a New England farmhouse. It rested on a rag carpet which had been woven on a big loom in the deam woven o and held in place by knotting the thread on either side of them. Here and there a large glass or gold or silver bead was threaded in and secured by passing the needle through it a second time. This long string of sparkling thread and beads was then twined in and out and around the little tree, giving a reproduction, on a diminutive scale, of a genuine Christmas tree, with its glittle tering ornaments and gold and silver chairs appear." The Introduction of Color Less extreme and quite as new in effect is the use of a damask cloth To complete this spotlessly white, of color. Linen, having thus regained its long-time prestige as a table accessory, turns to color both as bandings and as formalized design upon a white ground; also, as solid tone banded in white. Allwhite china, crystal and silver thus come into a delightful harmonization with the peach, wild-rose, nile, apricot, or periwinkle-blue cloth. Here the tonal charm is carried into floral decorations beautifully massed in the new small bowls, or floating in the large shallow receptacles now available for many neglected and exquisite floral notes.

With the reintroduction of color to the table by way of flowers, comes the reminder that the new glass services present one of the most color-loving hostess, practically every tone expressive of color interest being available, from service plate to stemware. The matched 'ensemble" may thus be sustained in relation to the cloth. Progress to Peace Will Be Slow, Says Master of Harrow

Education for Two Generations Necessary, It Is Said, to Attain Result

LONDON-"The state of mind from which the idea of war has been banished exists among large blocks of the people of the world," said Dr. Cyril Norwood, headmaster of Harrow. Speaking at the London Missionary Society's laymen's lunch in London recently on "The Chances of Permanent Peace," Dr. Norwood said: "There are 100,000,000 people of the United States who are not going to fight one another. It is clean outside the question that the members of the British Empire, should do so. I do not think there is the least chance that we could get the British Empire and the United States to line up against one another, whatever nasty things each of us may say re-

"In many instances the family wintering in Miami doesn't stop at the gladsome fact of living as cheaply as at home-it saves money while lolling in the lap of everlasting summer." -James Hay Jr., in Asheville Citizen.

People of national prominence and unquestioned judgment are constantly telling the story of Miami to the world in just such terms as these. You, too, should know the pleasures and benefits of winter in Miami. Miami is better prepared this winter than ever before to accommodate its winter visitors. #### REFORMS HELP MILLS OF SOUTH TO FORGE AHEAD

Economists Cite Elimination of Child Workers and Labor Surplus

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR ATLANTA. Ga.-The first southeastern economics conference, held here recently under the direction of Mercer Evans, professor of economics at Emory University, assembled economists from all parts of the section for the consideration and analysis of the South's economic and industrial problems. "Industrialism in the South," "Farm Problem," and "Taxation Problems in the South," were the main subjects for discussion.

Child labor is decreasing in the mill towns of the South, the employers having found it to be wasteful and unsound, according to Miss Jean Davis of Wells College. She further said that there is greater efficiency in labor, due to education, and that a reduction in labor surplus has resulted from higher ages for workers, which keeps the youth in instead of in the labor

A comparative analysis of manufacturing in the South in the years 1860, 1880, and 1920 was presented by R. P. Brooks, dean of the school of commerce of the University of Georgia. Clean, Cinderless, Luxurious, Scenic Route

A dependable railway

SHORE excursions teeming with sequel adventures for "Trader Horn". Sights that recall "Chang," "Grass" and "Moana" and thoroughly out-romance fantastic stories in contemporary magazines. The same marvels that made Sir Francis Drake and his swashbuckling companions stalk the high seas "for more"-but none of the inconveniences. A world, hitherto encountered in fiction only, reveals its curiosities. - Dancing girls at Bangkok wathed in brocaded replicas of the bas-reliefs of famous temples. Paradox of feast and famine-the Sphinx's riddle of a lost civilization where today jewels and tatters go hand in hand.

Circling the globe with the RESOLUTE, "Queen of Cruising Steamships," as vantage point—truly a luxurious adventure. -A management worldly-wise, intuitively sensing the desires of its guests .-A cuisine which brooks no rival.

GREAT BUYING POWER STILL IN EVIDENCE

Stock Market Moves Buoyantly Upward Despite Loans Increase

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (49)—The stock market turned a complete somersault on a record-breaking turn-over today. A tremendous accumulation of overnight buying orders sent prices of many active issues soaring 5 to 30½ points in early trading, but a swift selling movement just before mid-day cut down or wiped out many of the early gains, and sent a number of stocks 1 to 5 points below yesterday's final quotations.

A brisk recovery was in progress in the early afternoon.

Despite the elimination of sales from the tape, the ticker fell 45 minutes behind the market by 1 o'clock.

So great was the congestion of work in many of the large brokerage houses that the governors of the exchangement at noon and voted to suspend business on Saturday.

The mid-day selling movement was inspired by reports that an "important statement" would be given out by the Federal Reserve Bank at 1 p. m. Many traders apparently feared that another warning on credit inflation was coming, and they threw stocks overboard, by the statement proved to be merely the election of a new governor of the bank to succeed the late Benjamin Strong.

Case Threshing Machine soared NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (A)-The stock

bank to succeed the late Benjamin Strong.

Case Threshing Machine soared 30½ points to a new top at 515 and then dropped to 500, and Wright Aeronautical ran up 19 points to 289 and fell back to 264. Curtiss dropped from 164½ to 153½, Victor Talking Machine from 158½ to 147¾, and Radio from 379 to 361. Montgomery Ward dropped 12½ points below last night's close, and Vanadium Steel 5. General Motors ran up 5¾ points to 214½, and slipped back to 212¼.

New high records again were established by a wide assortment of issues, the fist including Andes, Kennecott, Inspiration and Cerro de Pasco coppers, Standard Oil of California, Marland, Superior Oil, Packard and Nash Motors, New Haven, Erie, Kansas (1995) and Pere Marguette.

Motors, New Haven, Erie, Kansas City Southern and Pere Marquette

railroads.

The market's ability to bounce back brought in fresh buying orders from speculators who had sold hastily and then rushed to get back their stock. On the up-turn Canadian Pacific touched 250½, a rise of 9½ points, and the best figure in more than 12 years. International Nickel and Midland Steel Products preferred also advanced materially. Sensational perland Steel Products preferred also advanced: materially. Sensational performers like Wright Aero and Radio came up 10 to 15 points from meir low levels on the drop. New Haven crossed 77 for the first time in several years. The closing was steady. Sales approximated 6,800,000 shares. Prices and activity improved in carly trading on the bond market today, with convertibles again leading the irregular advance in sympathy with the price of stocks.

Andes Copper 7s, Pathe Exchange 7s with warrants and Kayser & Co. 5½s moved to new high levels.

Rails generally improved, but gains were fractional.

Practical Social Work Undertaken in Poor Districts at Cambridge

> SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-During the last few years there has been a marked awakening in British university towns, with regard to the slums in their midst. Both at Oxford and Cambridge the civic authorities and voluntary societies have co-operated together with a view to relieving overcrowd-

ng. At Cambridge remarkable progress has been made by a voluntary body, known as the Cambridge Housing Society. In some of the old yards built in past centuries the poor have been living in some cases six to a room. In order to relieve such conditions the local Council of Chris-tian Witness and Others formed a Professors Declare There Will Be No Restriction society and asked for voluntary sub-scriptions, up to the present nearly £7000 having been received. With this money and with the help of a loan provided by the corporation some 45 houses have been built which are to be let at an average rent of 5s. 6d. a week. The tablet of the second housing scheme completed by the society is to be unveiled this autumn by B. S. Municipal bodies have erected

Pact or Memorandum?

COME weeks ago the Monitor asserted that the Anglo-French memorandum, accord, or pact, as one desires to call it, concerning military and naval armament, was dead. It was said then, and it is true now, that the less discussion of that unfortunate and irritating diplomatic blunder, the better for the intimate and friendly relationship which ought to be maintained between the United States and Great Britain. But certain repercussions which disturb the peace of British politics at the moment are of importance because they indicate the distinct feeling of regret, and even antagonism, on the part of the British people because of the action of their Government. The chorus of doubt and condemnation of the pact which arose from the press of the United States was scarcely more vociferous than that which emanated from the principal papers of England. It is true, of course, that party papers felt it necessary to give some measure of support to their own party leaders who were responsible for the agreement. But that support was halfhearted and ineffective. That the agreement had been entered into with the best intentions is but the sum of its defense. And even those who advanced this timid justification admitted that the method of entering upon it, and par-ticularly the secrecy with which it was enveloped, were incredibly stupid at this time. There are those claiming precise and inside information concerning the reasons for and the negotiations leading to the Anglo-French accord who defend it. The assertion is made that it was simply a memorandum, prepared at the request of the Preparatory Disarmament Conference of the League of Nations, and indicative of what Great Britain and France would urge when that commission came to grapple with the problem of world-wide limitation of armaments. Those who offer this defense protest openly against the understanding being referred to as either an agreement or a pact. They declare that it was merely a memorandum, of no binding force, and intended to serve only as a guide for negotiations when the League Commission finally gets down to work. But even if this construction of the agreement were to be taken as authoritative, it would leave Great Britain and France in the position of allies submitting to the United States an ultimatum on naval limitation. Lord Lee of Fareham, in a speech delivered at a dinner to Ambassador Houghton, has roundly condemned any such agreement, saying: "In doing business with America, England had better do it alone, unhampered by any embarrassing partnership.'

Unhappily for this theory, it has not been generally adopted by the British defenders of the pact, and it has been wholly repudiated by public opinion in Great Britain. Rightly or wrongly, the British public, like the public of the United States, have the idea that the agreement was a serious one between Great Britain and France, against the . United States, and involving the same issue that broke up the Tripartite Conference for the Limitation of Armament.

The encouraging thing, the gratifying thing about this situation, the thing which, even more than the fact that the pact is dead, will contribute to the renewal of Anglo-American friendship, is this circumstance that the British public has manifested the same indignation as has been presented by the American people. It is not the first time that a government, in dealing with an important feature of international relations, has found itself deserted by the people behind it. The British Government certainly has suffered this desertion.

An interesting feature of the present situation, as noted in an Associated Press dispatch the other day, is the fact that a Labor member of Parliament has given notice that he will ask the Foreign Secretary in Parliament whether before the naval accord was reached he followed the usual course of consulting the four dominions, Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, and the Irish Free State. Whatever Sir Austen Chamberlain's answer may be, it will be embarrassing to the Government. For if he did not consult the dominions, he will be pressed for an explanation as to why, and if he did consult them, and they expressed their accord, the theory that the whole affair was a memorandum will disappear.

But in all the discussion which may grow up about this occurrence, it is well to keep clearly in thought the fact that the British people have repudiated it as emphatically as the American people have condemned it.

China Goes on the Air

DECENT news from Nanking makes it clear that very soon China is to extend its opendoor policy to the ether. Once wary of too direct contact with the Western world, China today, in contracting with the Radio Corporattion of America to build it a high-powered government-owned radio station, is undertaking to bring the Chinese people and Chinese industry into the most intimate association with far-away lands which modern invention now makes possible. It is an undertaking thoroughly in keeping with China's new era of social and economic progress. Civil war has given way to a larger unity. After 4000 years of evolution, agriculture is gradually giving way to industry as the Nation's dominant pursuit.

To become master of the new conditions in which she finds herself, China is appreciating the necessity of fitting her people and her projects more closely into the network of the commercial and political ties knitting the twentieth-century-world. As far as the United States is concerned, adequate news accounts of current developments in China by cable are virtually unobtainable, so prohibitive are the prevailing cable rates. If the new governmentowned radio station, essential as it is to the facilities of foreign trade, is also destined to bring about a reduction of cable rates for the press, it will serve China well.

A Treaty to Promote Wine!

THE wine merchants of the leading wineproducing countries of Europe have enlisted the services of their governments to help gain for their trade a wider public patronage. Although this undertaking has only lately been disclosed, it was four years ago that Spain, France, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Luxembourg, Portugal and Tunis entered into a treaty for the establishment of an international wine office in Paris. This treaty was signed on Nov. 29, 1924, it came into effect on Oct. 29, 1927, and was only lately registered at the League of Nations.

The purpose of this new project of international co-operation, according to the text of the agreement, is "to collect, study and publish information tending to demonstrate the beneficent effects of wine" and to further "new scientific experiments" in order to "demonstrate the hygienic qualities of wine and its influence as an agent against alcoholism."

The many supporters of the growing movement against the liquor traffic throughout the world would scarcely expect to find much comfort in the formation of an international wine cartel. Yet if the purpose of this organization is to be accepted at its face value, even wine dealers have admitted the evils of alcoholism and are now given to promoting wine essentially as "an agent against alcoholism"!

Is wine such an agent? Before anti-alcoholic legislation became the persuasive public issue that it is, and before the wine trade of Europe began to feel the public reaction against alcoholic beverages of all kinds, "scientific experiments," of which the international wine office speaks so highly, had long been conducted on a basis which was disinterested and objective. Consider the findings of Dr. Paolo Amaldi of

It is a fact that the alcoholism which confronts Italy is alcoholism provoked by wine consumption. It is very difficult to fight against such a form of alcoholism, as wine drinking is associated with the whole social life. has in its favor the strongest prejudices and is considered as harmless, useful and indispensable. But the fact remains that whoever would fight against alcoholism must fight against the wine habit

The French Academy of Medicine, which informs its Government on matters of health, several years ago directed attention "to the rapid increase in liquor consumption that has taken place since the war," and protested vigorously against calling the fermented liquors-wine. beer and hard cider-hygienic drinks.

Consider also the words of Dr. Jeane Lepine, a member of the French Academy of Medicine: Among cases brought to my consultation which are year were due in an important part if not exclusively to habitual alcoholism, and, I hasten to add, to wine alcoholism.

Dr. Gauvreau, registrar of the Quebec College of Physicians, is no less decisive in his conclusions. He says:

Contemporary science maintains with reason and proof contemporary science maintains with reason and proof to support it that alcohol is truly a dangerous substance from which men should absolutely refrain. There are no hygienic drinks among alcoholic beverages. To be in the most complete possible possession of our faculties and of our natural powers at every moment of our lives, we must be rigorously abstinent.

Virtually every nation in the world is today making some attempt to reduce the evils of alcohol by regulative, restrictive and prohibitive measures. In so doing these nations have recognized that alcoholic beverages, are agents of social harm, and it is being proved in the United States that their reduction and prohibition not only serve social progress, but promote industrial prosperity.

Canes for Every Occasion

NE can imagine, with a generous imagination, that a gentlemanly centipede might find use for fifty walking sticks. For a biped man to own 1400 canes seems rather a surplus till the fact is explained by the information that he is a collector. Such is the wealth of walking sticks possessed by Rudolph Block, whose collection is, or lately has been, on loan exhibition in the United States National Museum at Washington; and this, for further oddity, not because they are canes but because they are wood.

Few collectors achieve the distinction of a unique collection, but Mr. Block's inspiration seems to have started in that direction when he began collecting specimens of different kinds of wood and having them made into walking sticks. Here was a hobby horse that had never before been ridden, and it came prancing up when the future rider one day said to himself: 'Why not get a walking stick made of every wood in the world?" Being mounted, it carried him all over the world by correspondence with foresters, wood technologists, and botanists; and the ride made valuable addition to the knowledge and literature of woods, and has so far assembled 1400 walking sticks, no two of which are alike. There are no doubt other collections of canes as such which would surprise the average observer by the variety of material other than wood that has been used and the ingenuity that has been expended in making them. The elephant has contributed his tusk, the rhinoceros his horn. Ingenuity has contrived canes that served also as receptacles for various small objects. An inventory of personal belongings in the time of Henry VIII includes a cane that carried perfumery, a timepiece, a pair of compasses, a foot rule, a knife, a file, and a whetstone. Canes have been found useful as receptacles in which to hide jewels. Swords and even pistols have been concealed in them; and time was when canes were made hollow and gay French gentlemen blew bon-bons through them at appreciative ladies.

After the Restoration, Englishmen of fashion followed a French vogue and carried their canes bedecked with ribbons; and when George was King the proper cane to carry was topped with a grotesquely carved little face. One past use of the cane survives in the meaning of the word as a verb, but the practice thus referred to having largely gone out, the verb is now of little or no value except for writers of historical

Leisure Demands Education

THAT public school education, the most important governmental activity in the United States, has not only assumed the proportions of big business, but also has brought to the fore the problem of the better use of leisure time, was emphasized at the First Annual Southern Conference on Education recently held at the University of North Carolina. Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia University stated that in the last eighteen years expenditure for public school education has increased 230 per cent, now reaching annually the enormous figure of approximately $2,000,000,000. And yet this sum expended for primary and secondary schools represents but 2.25 per cent of the income of the people of the United States, a proportion of the country's earnings which can scarcely be called excessive.

Professor Strayer, in emphasizing the need for education which will lead to a better use of the leisure time which is increasingly coming to the workers of the country, indicated that leisure employed in ways which unfit one for competent service is profitable neither to the individual nor to the public. Accordingly, education in music, literature and other fine arts which would furnish means of profitable entertainment should be encouraged, and provided for in the school curriculum.

As industry is being progressively mechanized, workers will inevitably have more leisure. Comparatively few, it seems, when thrown back upon their own resources, can, without some form of higher culture, utilize leisure profitably. With the increase of leisure and wealth, preparation for the right use of leisure has an urgent demand. It is a problem with which educators must immediately grapple.

The "Noes" Have It

News Item: The American Foreign Trade Council has set $145,000,000,000 as the loss to world commerce occasioned by war, since 1914.

OOK at it this way: There haven't been half that many seconds-no, not by 10,000,000,-000-since the dawn of the Christian era. Look at it another way: Convert this amount into silver dollars and it would take 900,000 five-ton trucks loaded to capacity to transport them; stack them and you have 227,000 piles a mile high; spread out they would pave a solid silver highway 165 feet wide from New York to San Francisco.

Look at it still another way: $145,000,000,-000 would pay the value of every farm (including land, buildings, implements, machinery, and live stock) in the United States, then give each farmer $10,000 "relief," and still leave enough to buy every bushel of corn, wheat and oats raised in the United States in the last two

Look at it this way, too: That amount would pay for all the public schools in the United States, endow each with $200,000, give every teacher $20,000 as a nest-egg, provide a sum for investment the interest on which at 4 per cent would double their present salaries and pay them year in and year out, and leave enough to hand every pupil a little present of $1000.

Look at it from this viewpoint: It represents a definite economic loss of $500 to every man, woman and child in the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Italy.

Was it worth while? The "noes" have it.

Editorial Notes

The reports coming from the convention of the American Federation of Labor that the United States is rapidly approaching the general adoption of a five-day working week, seem to be in line with the modern economic theory that fewer hours make more employment; more money to spend makes greater demand for other than mere necessities; increased demand makes increased production; increased production makes greater profits; greater profits tend to make higher wages, and a higher wage scale, finally, permits of shorter hours—a sort of economic house that Jack built.

Although the punishment seems at first sight inordinately severe, the recent sentence pronounced against a drunken automobile driver in England, that he was disqualified from driving for life, points an issue worth considering. A severe sentence should be imposed on anyone who drives an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Perhaps a better and more constructive sentence, however, might be to the effect that such an one was to be disqualified until he produced evidence satisfactory to the court that he had not taken a drink over a period of, say, a year.

Dr. George B. Franklin, associate professor of English at Boston University, has scored a "scoop." Upon learning that thirty-five students in his Shakespeare class were seeking journalism degrees, he assumed the rôle of a city editor and distributed assignments to his staff of students who are now writing complete newspaper accounts, including headlines, of the events in Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

Hardly has the engulfing lava from Mt. Etna begun to cool than plans for rehabilitating the Sicilian towns that were in its path are under way. How different from the days when Pompeil and Herculaneum succumbed to Vesuvius!

When the Pennsylvania State Art Commission went on record as refusing to approve the use of cannon in the future as war memorials, another shot was fired at the goal of world peace!

A British Journalist in America

By Collinson Owen

In describing his experiences in the United States, Mr. Owen, novelist and dramatic critic, has employed the same light and entertaining style which has distinguished his work in the London Daily Telegraph. He has prepared a series of fifteen articles for The Christian Science Monitor, of which the following is the first. The stories are the quick impressions of an observer seeing the cities of the United States for the first time.

DON'T remember just who it was who said that, | though America had been discovered many times, the fact had always been hushed up. Any such reticence has disappeared since his day. The world has now definitely heard about America. Here and there, in the newspapers of Europe, one quite often sees references to her, her in-stitutions and her citizens. These things have a way of creeping into the news. However much she may wish it herself, America can no longer hide.

Yet despite a process of discovery which in latter years has become intensive, one cannot deny that it is a moment of considerable magnitude first to step on the landing stage at New York. At my own moment of discovery I had all the wonder of Columbus within me. In some ways I had the advantage of him. He had no idea of what was inside America. He had never heard of Mr. Babbitt or the Ziegfeld Follies, of Mr. Volstead, whereas I was more or less familiar with the existence of these and many other phenomena.

It was still quite early in the morning when I made my discovery. Say about 9:30. Our liner had anchored overnight, with twinkling lights far to right and left of us to show that we were really nearly there. As a rule the modern discoverer of America refuses to take the sea in anything less than a 60,000-ton ship. Ours was a modest cockleshell of some 21,000 tons and what is more or less-she had taken ten days to do the crossing from London River. She had no swimming bath on board, and the most careful search failed to discover anything in the nature of a cardsharper. There was nobody of appalling wealth, and not a single big business man from the middle West holding down the lounge room in the approved fashion.

In some ways, then, a rather disappointing crossing. On the other hand, there were certain advantages. Our passenger list, almost entirely American, was composed of very nice people; what in England we should call upper middle class. They were almost all returning from long holiday tours in Europe. The American girl was there in considerable numbers. They had been away for three months, six months, a year! When these Americans take holidays they refuse to think of week-ends.

Here is a sample deck-chair conversation, selected at random from some hundreds: Myself: How did you enjoy your trip to Europe?

Miss America: Very much.

Myself: Have you been away long? Miss A: We left New York in the middle of May. Myself: Really. And where did you go to in Europe

Miss A: Well, first we went to Paris for a month. Then we went on to Florence, Rome and the Lido. Then we had a month in the Bavarian Alps, did Vienna on the way back, and finished up with six weeks in London and England. . . . After hearing of a modest program like this, one is left in retreat. The rout is completed when one's companion of the moment remarks casually that this is her fourth time "over." Even engaging young misses of twelve or fourteen are liable to say this. These Americans have made continental travel look suburban. They rob one even of the thrill of being in mid-Atlantic. And year after year they cross, thousands of them, shipload after shipload. Despite that, there are many millions of Americans who have never discovered Europe, and never will.

Even a ten-day voyage ends. Five minutes to go. A solemn moment, yet, as is so often the way with solemn moments, electrified by a sort of desperate gayety. Tongues are loosened. Hearts are opened. The last timidities of ten days' acquaintance are swept away with a rush. British reserve is finally vanquished by American heartiness. I am invited to visit Kentucky, Alabama, New Haven, Los Angeles and Washington.

It had long been a serious whimsey of mine that I would refuse to believe in the existence of seen the Statue of Liberty with my own eyes. And I almost missed it. A glorious morning of autumn sun, but with mist in the sunshine. As we sailed in, reporters and camera men politely busy, there suddenly appeared, away to port, the majestic emblem of Liberty, faintly visible in a translucent shroud of mist, coppery green in color, ethereal, dreamlike, despite her size. A brief but most artistic moment. A minute later and she was gone. It was a narrow escape for America.

Then mountains and peaks rising out of mist. Eager voices indicating this peak and that. The famous sky line. Not the Jungfrau, but the Woolworth Building. Not the Eiger, but the Equitable. Just as exciting, in its way. And no doubt just as beautiful, with or without mist. In any case a tremendous preparation for a discoverer who is just about to land.

As the tugs, each with its widespread golden eagle, butt us gently into place, I feel that this is the rise of the curtain on a great personal drama. A vast new country to be explored, full of many things: a hundred million people to be seen; people who in many ways must be considered as foreigners, yet who by some magic speak the same language as my own, so that nothing will be hidden. A country familiar by a lifetime of reading, of photographs, of the movies, yet utterly unknown. America with all its tumbling crowd of preconceived impressions, from the youthful days of Buffalo Bill worship, down through the years to the era of President Wilson and so to the present day of Big Bill Thompson, Lindbergh, Mayor Walker and the rest. A big moment for me, despite those traveling Americans who trot up and down Europe with no more concern than we travel the home counties.

And here is America at last. I am talking to a customs officer in the familiar blue uniform and peaked cap. I wonder whether he is armed, but decide that his is probably regarded as a fairly peaceful occupation. He is quite a nice customs officer, even when he asks me to open my trunk. It is an American trunk, of which I am very proud. But it is packed so tight that when one releases the last shackle it springs open, briskly as a guardsman to attention. Boots and boot-trees shoot out. I can't close it again. A fat porter, of Near-Eastern complexion and speaking vague English, kindly helps me. Between us we throttle it. Then a taxi and—whiz!—we are in New

That first moment was nearly the last. How the bigger car escaped cutting us in two will probably never be known. The taxi's four-wheel brakes screech alarmingly. (I was to learn soon that all New York's taxis do that.) Onward! We hit a large hole in a cobbled street and I bounce, terrified. (I was to learn to my surprise that there are lots of holes in New York streets.) We pass through unimposing thoroughfares, in which there are colored men and strange people. A wild ride over, we draw up at an immense hotel.

This is not a hotel but a town, a commercial town. There are more than 2000 bedrooms, and apparently every guest has ten visitors. The main entrance like a fair. Conventions are proceeding, and well-dressed business men are here from all over the United States. They wear badges bearing their names. Thus if I had wished I could have gone at once to one of them and said, "Mr. Earl Petersen, I'm glad to meet you." Instead I am shot up twelve floors from the superheated hall to a superheated bedroom. I open a window, very gingerly, and find that I am perched halfway up a brick cliff twenty-four stories high. There is a skyscraper near, just being finished, some forty stories high. I feel like a sea gull, with none of its confidence.

What follows is fantastic. Down in the superheated hall a friend plucks me from the multitude. We plunge into the roaring subway, which is all, and more, that one has ever heard about it. We rise to the surface and join a river of tiny people flowing along at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. This is Wall Street. The buildings are colossal. The individual is a mere atom. That is all one need say, at the moment, of the effect of these overwhelming works of men.

Down into the basement restaurant of the Equitable, the most massive office building in the world, an immense plate of food is served—excellent food—together with iced water. My copious lunch, which includes water, rolls and butter, and a wholesale helping of apple pie, comes to something like nine shillings. As we go out I look carefully round at the well-dressed men who are lunching. There is not a face that might not be seen in Lombard Street. That is the strange part about this foreign country.

We enter the Woolworth Building. Why? Anyhow, we enter the Woolworth Building. I am a rubberneck. A pale, subdued woman of thirty-five, who looks hardly adven-turous enough to serve in a London teashop, whizzes us at terrific speed up toward the roof. She ought to be murmuring "Glass of milk and a buttered scone." Inscead she crashes us up to the fortieth floor. There a small man squeezes out of the packed elevator to go to his office. Imagine having an office on the fortieth floor! One wonders what he sells there. Balloons, one hopes.

So to the top. Nearly 800 feet of it. New York below, with all its puzzling arrangement of land and water, Ellis Island, sunshine, mist and smoke. It is appalling to have buildings like this. Also the Woolworth Building inside is something of a cheap show, with picture-postcards and souvenirs. I prefer it in all its majesty from the harbor.

So the bewildering day wears on. At night another friend, who knew New York in the long ago, when there were no skyscrapers, takes me walking, and describes the immense changes that a few years have made. We mingle in the electric glare and the seething crowds on Broadway, and elsewhere, nearer the Fifth Avenue region, look upon the fantastic spectacle of immense buildings lighted tier after tier to the stars. There is nothing like this elsewhere in the world. Fairyland, magnified immensely, with anything that may be garish or brutal by day softened by night. It is overwhelming, even stunning. In fact, I am a little bit frightened. Men were not made to live like this. And near the Public Library, mercifully modest in height and showing that dignity does not depend alone on soaring stories, we come on a strange thing. A man is on the pavement with a large telescope, pointing at an almost full moon. I have ten cents' worth of moon, and feel that I am meeting an old friend in a strange land. I point out a star lying near the moon.
"That's Jupiter," says the astronomer. "She is now more than 350,000,000 miles away. She has four moons, just like our earth has one moon. Three to the right. One to the left."

Three hundred and fifty million miles! It seems a long way, even in a country of such great distances. He fits on another eyepiece. There, large as a plum, is upiter. To right and left are the four moons. It is astounding. I have never seen Jupiter's moons before. They do me good. They "check up" New York. They assure me that there really will come a limit to what man can do with brick and stone, and that even if in a year or so forty stories become sixty or eighty, it will be all the same to Jupiter. It is a comforting train of thought. So much so that I gratefully hand the astronomer some more

"You're splashing it," says my guide and friend, as we walk away. "Half a dollar's too much even for New York. But I explain to him that I am quite content, knowing that however long I stay in the United States I have just made the cheapest purchase I shall ever find there.

Notes From Berlin

DECENTLY there was a week of exhibitions here, all of them of considerable importance for Berlin and some even for beyond its boundaries. The "Ila' (international aviation exhibition), of course, took precedence of all the others. It was interesting not only to aviators and constructors, but exercised an extraordinary fascination for the general public. On several days the number of visitors exceeded 60,000, and it was found necessary to close the entrances. Anybody who was out to make a study of his fellow beings could find a fund of amusement in observing the schoolboys, who were admitted in great numbers for a nominal fee, with the laudable desire of cultivating interest in aviation in the rising generation. The youngsters, clad in "shorts" and blazers, sometimes in an imitation of a "wind jacket," as befitting the occasion, were very excited and important, each believing himself an expert in this field of endeavor. They toucped everything they could reach, tapping bodies and wings with critical mien, and exchanging opinions as to stability and prospects. But before the battered Bremen which bore Koehl, Fitzmaurice and von Huenefeld over the Atlantic their voices were hushed. Among the many foreign visitors to the "Ila" were Colonel Fitzmaurice, Sir Sefton Brackner and Clarence Chamberlin.

Organized by the German Hausfrauen-Verein, the large and influential association of housewives and business women, a comprehensive exhibition drew all Berlin women and quite a number of men to the large halls of the Zoological Gardens. It was arranged in three sections: the Home, the Career, and Culture, by Frau Charlotte Muesam, one of Berlin's most active workers in the cause of woman's welfare. Statistics show that in Germany to every three men are four women and of these women 366 per cent are engaged in earning their own livelihood. For women who have to manage their household as well as to attend to business everything should be done, it is contended, to assist them and reduce their domestic responsibilities to a minimum.

Models of homes, bed-sitting rooms and kitchens were displayed that seem to make housekeeping a pleasant game, so easy of management they appear, and there is a "store of the future" that in its labor-saving properties makes the German housewife's mouth water: poultry ready for the oven or the pot, vegetables and fruit that need no preparation, cake needing only baking and every description of canned food. All this is, of course, nothing new in the United States and England, but German women are not so far ahead as their Anglo-Saxon sisters in this respect, although in many improvements in house utensils and in facilities for washing and mending they are progressive. Beautiful specimens of arts and crafts by German girl students added to the attractions of this comprehensive exhibition. "Buy German wares and so lessen unemployment," was one of the

A long-cherished scheme of Dr. Jessner, director-inchief of the Berlin State theaters, is about to be realized. A "studio" in connection with these theaters will be founded on the following lines: Independently from the ordinary weekly repertory, plays of problematical nature are to be produced at Sunday matinées Should such pieces prove their worth they will find a place in the regular repertoire. The first play to be performed (in December) at the "studio" is Heinrich Christian Meyer's drama, "The Case of Amrie Delmar," which will be followed some weeks later by Iwan Heilbut's "Bürgertragödie." Whether the "studio" plays will be acted by artists of the State Theater is not yet decided.
